

Stress-free student letting: a landlord's checklist

Managing student rental properties doesn't have to be a headache. Here are our top tips for getting the most out of your investment.

Contracts and planning

Perform reference checks on all tenants

If they're coming straight from halls, you can ask the university or student accommodation provider to give you a reference instead.
Put the right clauses in the contract

A watertight contract will make it much easier to negotiate deposit deductions should the need arise.
Pick the right kind of tenancy

Student lets are almost always Assured Shorthold Tenancies for a fixed term.
Provide housekeeping tips

Good things to include are the importance of room ventilation, how to prevent pest infestation and the location of the stopcock in the event of flooding.
Use a tenancy deposit scheme

Landlords are legally obliged to protect their tenants' deposits in a tenancy deposit protection scheme within 30 days of receiving the funds - you have been warned!
Maintain a clear inventory

A detailed inventory will help you negotiate property damage disputes at the end of the tenancy.
Contact their guarantors

Call up tenants' guarantors to make sure they're aware of their liability for any unpaid rent or damages.
Check your tenants in

A detailed inventory will help you negotiate property damage disputes at the end of the tenancy.

The home and furnishings

Provide double beds, desks and wardrobes

Students spend more time in their rooms than they used to, so good furnishings in every bedroom are a must.
Install high-speed broadband

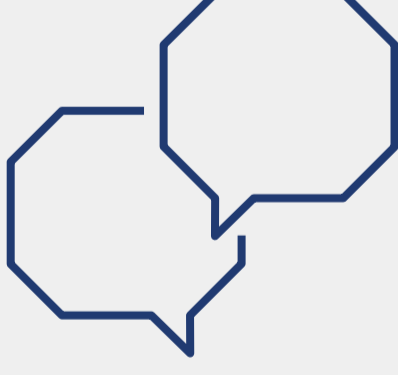

Young people are more reliant on the internet than ever and an unreliable or slow connection is bound to be a source of frustration and may lead to disputes.
Create communal spaces that stand out

Communal spaces with functional, comfortable furniture will help your house stand out when potential tenants are viewing properties.
Provide quality white goods

Cheap appliances are more likely to get broken, which will cost you more money and frustrate your tenants.
Add value by providing a television

While this isn't essential, it can be an attractive point of differentiation between your property and others.

Management and maintenance

Keep an open channel of communication

Give tenants your contact details and encourage them to get in touch if they have an issue. If you don't hear from them for a while, don't be afraid to check in.
Provide a moving out checklist

Remind tenants to review the inventory and return the property in the same condition and to the same standard of cleanliness as it was at the start.
Conduct regular inspections

Write regular inspections every 3, 4 or 6 months into your tenancy agreement.

Students are tenants like any other

Focus on the fundamentals

By drawing up the right contracts, carrying out due diligence, providing a good service and managing the relationship professionally, the odds of a dispute are massively reduced.
